Haiti quake death toll tops 200,000

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The death toll from the Jan. 12 earthquake in Haiti has surpassed 200,000, according to a report from the United Nations.

Deaths from the quake are still being counted, but the UN says the toll is likely to reach 300,000.

The quake killed about 230,000 people and injured more than 300,000. It also destroyed or damaged about 2.5 million homes.

Politics: The classic marketing challenge

The classic marketing challenge of how to reach a mass market is being faced by the Labour Party in the run-up to the general election. The party's marketing strategy is to reach a mass market of voters who are not traditionally Labour supporters. This is a challenge that has faced many political parties over the years.
